

The SCIENCE FICTION Book Club News

There are many levers to crack open a mind.

Pain. The blade. Sleeplessness. Simple. Long interrogations. Degradation. Hope dangled and then snatched away...

I've used them all. I'm an expert at opening minds; it's part of my duties, a very important part.

I inspected my latest subject covertly... I knew what he had done; and what was going to be done to him. The question was, could I pry anything useful out of him first...

A supreme tour de force... compelling, dramatic and unforgettable!

The Delyene have learned the language of their Terrene 'guests' — but they do not really understand the strange creature that calls itself Homo Sapiens. Of all the Delyene, the Kimassu Lady knew them the best... but there were so many things about them which even she could not understand: so many differences between the two races. She could not possibly comprehend their 'technology', their 'wars', their strange, unnatural sense of male superiority and lack of female leadership — and their total lack of the female virtues, especially honour. But they are powerful. The Delyene are outgunned, outmanned and outscienced; and worst of all, they are contemptuous of dangers they cannot understand and refuse to see. The Kimassu Lady alone realises the terrible danger the Terrenes pose — and that, somehow, they must be driven from Delyafam's shores.

This is a powerful and haunting saga by a writer with an uncanny ability for portraying opposed and alien cultures. It will captivate, terrify and entertain you right up to the very last page — and its memory will linger on. DON'T MISS IT!
