'Some have believed that this structure of the universe should be rejected as impossible' — Galileo Galilei, The Starry Messenger, 1610

One of the leading journals of science fiction, Galileo Magazine of Science and Fiction was known from the beginning for its editorial élan and the originality of its contents. For this dynamic book its editor, Charles C Ryan, has specially selected some of its most inspired contributions. These are stories that stand out as unforgettable classics: stories that are messengers from faraway places and will transport you far beyond the boundaries of time and space. 198pp

The Minotaur, 'celebrated monster with the body of a man and the head of a bull'; Circe, 'the enchantress famed for her magic and venomous herbs'; Pegasus, the glorious winged horse; the Harpies, 'fierce filthy loathsome, monsters with faces of women and bodies of vultures'... over 2000 characters, monsters, gods and bizarre creatures from Greek and Roman mythology are identified and explained in this absorbing fact-filled reference book. The histories of the gods, the mysteries of the underworld, the accomplishments of the heroes which have inspired writers for centuries are illuminated and outlined in lively cross-referenced entries. An important and compelling book for all sf fans. 8 x 5 in / 300pp / biblio
